

Rules

- Use of the DDIExtraction 2013 evaluation test dataset for any purpose whatsoever is prohibited.
- No changes to the system are allowed once the evaluation data are released.
- No human intervention is allowed prior to the submission of your results. This means that, there must be no modifications to, or human examination of, the test data.
- Every participating team must submit a detailed system description.
- Every participating team must attend the evaluation workshop and present a system talk.
- Participants must refrain from publishing results and/or releasing statements of performance until the official DDIExtraction 2013 results are published.
- Participants may not compare its results with the results of other participants, such as stating rank ordering or score difference.

Participants will be free to publish results for their own system, but, it will not be allowed to name other participants, or cite another team's results without permission from the other team.